Land Use Initiative On November Ballot

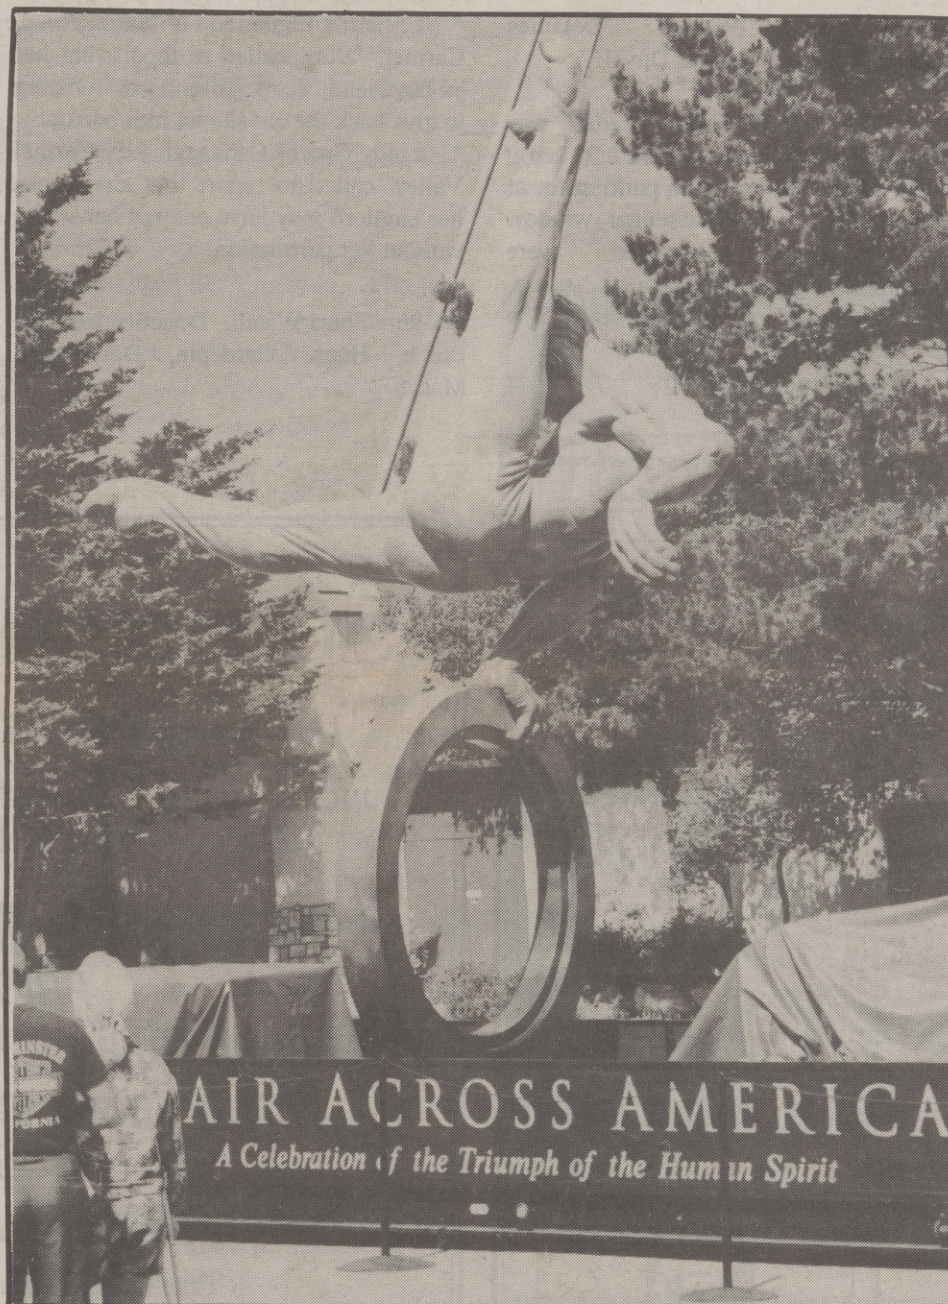

The coalition of public interest groups known as PROTECT (Protect Resources of the Entire County Today) announced that its Agricultural Land and Resource Conservation Initiative has qualified to become a measure on the November, 1996 ballot.

On May 30, 1996, 15,095 signatures on the petition were submitted to the Monterey County Election Department by PROTECT. A computer generated random selection of 500 signatures were examined for verification and 85.8%, or 429, signatures were valid. Using that statistical sampling, the initiative petition contained the signatures of 12,952 qualified registered voters of the County of Monterey. (9,197 signatures were needed for the petition to qualify).

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors will now be required to adopt the initiative as presented, or it will proceed on to the November ballot to be voted on by the people of Monterey County.

The initiative seeks to protect Monterey County's agricultural lands, natural resources, and the quality and quantity of its water supply. Until 2025, the initiative prohibits changing the land use designation of Agricultural or Resource Conservation land (as described in the current Monterey County General Plan) unless voted on by the people, or redesignated by the Board of Supervisors (only after complying with five specific conditions outlined in the initiative), or unless the land is annexed to a city or town.

The PROTECT coalition includes the Highway 68 Coalition, S.M.I.L.E. (Save Moss Landing's Indians, Land and Environment), the South County Coalition and Concerned Citizens of Monterey Peninsula.

Local residents had a brief opportunity to observe the olympics inspired "Flair Across America" when the bronze was trucked to Sunset Center and erected for a quiet day of viewing before a major San Francisco showing.

Caution: Get Ready For Fire Season Now

According to the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District, each year thousands of wildfires burn out of control in California. And each year hundreds of families lose everything they own and value because of these fires - and because they didn't take the time to protect their homes and property. Now is the time to make your property "wildland fire safe" by following the practices described below on the fire hazard abatement checklist.

Cut weeds: maintain a defensible space around your home by cutting all dry grass and brush within 30 feet of all structures. Increase this distance to 100 feet on hillsides. Maintain a well pruned and watered landscape within your defensible space.

Clean roof: clean all pine needles and leaves from your roof, eaves, and gutters.

Trim trees: trim trees back from structures and cut limbs within 6 feet of the ground.

Chimney cap: install a 1/2" mesh screen spark arrester on all chimney outlets.

Driveway access: trim trees and shrubs from your driveway to provide a 12 foot wide by 15 foot high corridor to allow fire equipment to reach your home.

Address posted: make sure that your address is posted and visible from the street.

Pre-plan your escape: know what to do if a fire approaches your property. Identify two escape routes from your home. Locate important documents, photos, and other valuables and provide for ready access. Decide how to manage your pets. Establish a meeting place for

FUN IN THE SUN

Dave Lyon

As the warm summer weather sneaks upon us and the fog retreats (we hope) to the coast, we once again turn our thoughts poolside, and return to the cast and crew of "Daze Of Our Lives", hanging out at the Paradise Valley Community Pool.

As you will remember from last year, Snack Bar manager Trent Gnarley had just been caught stealing from the snack bar to fund his custom surfboard business. Pool Director Fiona Waystyle was developing more than a passing interest in Pool maintenance man Richard Missions, and professional dive stud Dane Pike was searching for the perfect speedo...

Let's join our friends Richard and Fiona now at the pool office as Richard exclaims ... "Why is there so much golden retriever hair in the pool filter?" His words fall upon deaf ears, but Fiona is reading his thoughts loud and clear. She leans seductively against the snack bar counter, all the while admiring Richard's tanned, muscular legs.

Sighing heavily she says, "Oh, Richard, is there any way at all that the test could have been wrong...?" Richard turns the dog hair laden filter over in his hands, wondering to himself if Fiona is talking about the chlorine test, or the one his other girlfriend isn't supposed to know about...

Getting no response from him she quickly changes the subject. "I tried calling you last night...", she said... "I even left a message...you never returned my call." Richard pulls a final blob of retriever fur from the pool filter and turns to face her. "I was busy", he tells her. "I was, ah, I was watching KCCN. That's it, that's what I was doing, great news cast, KCCN...I really missed them..."

Fiona is about to speak again but is forced to hold her thoughts. The first of the weekend pool customers has just arrived. Richard steps quickly from the pool office, leaving Fiona and a pile of dog hair behind.

"Yes", she says to the folks arriving, "swim lesson sign-ups are still available, but class size is limited, and all sign-ups must be done here at the pool office..." Fiona goes on to explain that the pool will be open full time for the summer season beginning on Saturday, June 15th, and will be open every day from noon til 5 p.m. for family rec. swim.

Fiona is about to explain the financial benefits of joining the Paradise Valley Community Center when lifeguard Scott Mustang burst through the office door. "Come quick, come quick", he shouted, "Agustus Gloop is stuck in the tubular poolslide." (The first 10 persons who can successfully explain this obscure cinema reference will receive a free coke at the snack bar...)

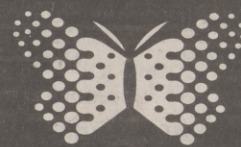

Meanwhile in the front parking lot water aerobics instructor Kelly Trooper and her best friend Chrissy Sweet have just arrived in Kelly's convertible, covered with dust from driving through the road construction at the mouth of the valley.

"Oh my god", she says to her friend, "I am like, sooooo glad now that the pool is open every day at noon for recreational swim, "maybe this summer that dive stud Dane will finally notice me...I must have bought a dozen new swim suits"...Kelly leaps quickly from the car, leaving Chrissy to ponder a few thoughts herself about the dive stud...

Little does either of them know that Dane is planning to make his move on sexy lifeguard Molly, and has already asked her to the Fireman's Ball, to be held in Paradise Valley that very Saturday night.

Where is all that dog hair coming from? And what about the chlorine test? Is Richard's other girlfriend really getting suspicious? Can they ever get Agustus out of the poolslide? And what does Kelly have in mind for Dane? Will they ever finish the construction at the mouth of the valley? What will happen at the Fireman's Ball? And what about the missing ice cream at the snack bar? Was Richard really watching KCCN? Or is it just as bland as ever? Tune in next time...

Gurries In the Saddle at Robles del Rio

The historic Robles del Rio Lodge on La Ventana, high above Carmel Valley Village, has been owned and run by the Gurries family of Gilroy for over a decade.

The Gurries' son, Glen Gurries, held sway over the management and recent renovations of the property, following the 1980s purchase of the property from the late Bill Woods.

Following a brief period of non-family management, Glen's parents, Ron and Yolanda Gurries, have assumed full-time management of the Lodge and famous Ridge Restaurant.

The Ridge Restaurant will be open for lunch and dinner, seven days each week. The pool facility has re-opened for day use by the community for a fee of five dollars per day.

your family. Develop a neighborhood plan.

Contact your local fire department for additional information or for a courtesy fire safety inspection. In addition to these wildland fire safety guidelines, take the time now to further firesafe your home by checking the following items:

Smoke detectors: test your smoke detectors regularly. It is estimated that only one-half of all smoke detectors installed in homes still work. This simple device is your best investment in home fire safety.

Fire extinguishers: place a fire extinguisher in your kitchen and in your garage and make sure your entire family knows how to operate it.

Home fire escape plan: develop and practice a home fire escape plan. Identify 2 ways out of every room and choose a family meeting place. Children and the elderly especially need to practice these skills.

Disaster preparedness: be prepared to provide for your own needs for 72 hours following an earthquake, a storm or other disaster.

AS THE RIVER RUNS

Norman Spaulding

From Tularcitos and River School, through Carmel Middle School and Carmel High, the five children Jennifer and I have born and raised together, along with the children of thousands of other eager expectant hopeful parents, have been sent to Carmel Unified School District schools.

For me, 1996 is a very special year, our fifth child Sunny, graduates from CHS along with her class and friends. Unlike her brothers and sisters before her, she has not been top of the class, class president, sports team captain, cheer leader, voted most likely to succeed or admitted to a high calibre private or Ivy League college. She has been a solid contributor to campus activities.

Our Sunny is a product of one of the top 20 school systems in California (CUSD), and we are proud parents. Yes, Sunny, like her outstanding brothers and sisters will go to a four year college.

Yet, I am concerned for the class of '96 and those that follow. We hold high academic expectations in this community. Twenty years ago, graduating from Carmel High meant that a student had outstanding preparation from a school ranked in the top 1% in California. California was then ranked Number 1 in America in public education, and America was Number 1 in the world. Diplomas from CHS were world class.

In the intervening years America has fallen toward the bottom of the list among nations. California has fallen to the bottom of the list in America.

It is terrifying to realize that our vaunted 1996 CHS, while still ranking at the top in California, ranks below mediocre schools in Louisiana and is not even in the running internationally.

We all thought we were so insulated, so superior, and so certain that our children were getting the same high quality education; we presumed that excellence was intrinsic in a CUSD education, and thus we failed to see ourselves slip down the academic wall.

A pathetic few of this year's class of good, enthusiastic students even bothered to apply to the nation's best colleges, where they must compete with students from the rest of America and from Europe, Asia, Arabia and Africa, where education is prized and important.

There is a core of parents, alumni and teachers who have fought to preserve the cultural academic excellence at Carmel High. They are to be respected for their resolve to keep the dam of societal ignorance from overflowing onto this once fertile land of international academic excellence.

Take your fingers out of your ears! The greater CUSD community cannot hoist the blame on federal intervention, state mandates, teachers' unions or administrators.

The responsibility rests 100% on the shoulders of this entire community - retired, working, wealthy or middle class. As a community we have failed to place high value on the vital importance of high quality education. We are failing our children and grandchildren by being too selfish, too self-indulged, and too irresponsible to give these children the rich opportunity to learn that they deserve.

CUSD is broken and in disrepair. The children, our future, are suffering ... and the extreme problem will not be corrected by turning CHS, CMS, Tularcitos, Captain Kidd and River School into steel holding places for children.

It will be a long, long time before Clinton or Karas or Wilson or any other politician even cares about solving our education problem.

The teachers, staff and administrators may be paid enough but the facilities need upgrade and repair. Challenge yourself, your company, your organization, your association, to give big dollars, big love, huge time and more to insuring that CUSD is at the top in California, America and the world.

Do more than just throw lots of money. We may be tops in golf. We can make CUSD tops in excellence in education in the world.

Like the horror stories of inner city schools in the 1950s, Carmel High is graduating students who have little technical understanding of basic national or world geography. Bright wonderful Carmel children are graduated with decent grades who have actually read less than a dozen books in their entire academic life. Many are functionally illiterate when confronted with non-school text reading materials. Very few have a clue how even county or state government works.

The hard sciences, physics, chemistry, biology, have been almost fully replaced with soft science walks on the beach, hikes and fluff. Math? Children who have barely mastered multiplication and subtraction can somehow get Bs.

Carmel High's once vaunted cultural enrichment and technical training programs are either gone or pathetic skeletons of their old glory. In the application of modern computer technology and acquisition of equipment we are woefully behind.

What do these graduates know? They know a lot about driving, condoms, sex, AIDS, alternative life styles and community service. Do not misunderstand me, these are generally good kids and there are some who are striving for academic excellence.

We certainly cannot blame the children for the shabby state of education. The responsibility rests with the entire community. The answer is not selling off school property for stop gap fundings. And the answer is not sitting on our thumbs waiting for the state or feds to give CUSD a shot in the arm.

The answer is to do those things that made CUSD a nationally respected school system in the past. We need to restore high quality education, not try to reinvent education:

1. School Bonds - to pay for equipment purchases; structural repairs; modernization; restoral of technical, cultural and sports programs and grounds.

2. Grant - solicitation of private and public grant funds that will enhance academic excellence.

3. Fund Raising - a direct program to involve more local events as active sponsors of CUSD, e.g. The Concours Italiano at Quail Lodge.

4. Direct Support - engage local businesses and service clubs in ongoing direct programs of giving, training, work experience and student guidance. (Too often businesses who want to contribute are thwarted, even discouraged by CUSD, because there is no viable mechanism to accept help when it is offered).

5. Volunteers - create pro-active programs to involve parents, seniors and the community at large, in academics, sports, tutoring, cultural and technical activities.

6. Community attitude - an ongoing public relations effort to encourage a positive commitment to making our schools the best in the world.

7. More ideas - there must be many other fine ideas that this writing does not include. The school board needs to create convenient routes for community participation.

This is one of the wealthiest communities in the world. We have the best in golf, nature, art, ocean, sun, tennis, lifestyle, parks and weather. It is an embarrassing shame that our schools are only among the best of the worst in the industrialized world. Our children deserve to enjoy that same excellence in education.

YOUR WORLD & MINE

Araby Colton

SIC TRANSIT GLORIA

A noted historian has said, "Civilized man has marched across the face of the earth, and left a desert in his footprints."

Not a nice thing to say of us civilized folks, with our lovely ideals of human rights, democracy, "the good life", etc.

But just take a glance at the world's civilizations.

Take the Mediterranean region, the cradle of western civilization. Syria, Palestine, Algeria, Tunisia, Greece, Italy, Crete, Lebanon - all once prosperous, growing creative civilizations, but how short lived. After an average shelf life of 1000 to 1500 years each of these civilizations declined and perished, or the people moved on to new lands.

Why, how, did this happen? Regions that once supported large populations, great cultures, now among the poorest areas on earth, with the lowest standards of living in the modern world.

Quite simply, as George Washington is supposed to have said, man did it with his little hatchet, and his plows, and his livestock. He cut down or burned the timber from the hillsides. His herds overgrazed and denuded the grasslands, he killed the wildlife, the fish and other water life. The eroded soil from the treeless and grassless hillsides clogged his streams, filling his reservoirs, irrigation canals and harbors.

Take Lebanon, settled around 2000 B.C. by the Phoenicians, the prime traders of the Mediterranean world, venturing out into the Atlantic as far as Britain.

Their forested hillsides, "The Cedars of Lebanon", provided the Phoenicians with timber, a highly marketable product, needed by treeless Egypt and Mesopotamia for temples and palaces, by Greece and Rome for war galleys.

Using bronze axes, some 150,000 men deforested the steep hillsides, providing the basis of a prosperity which lasted through the sixth century B.C.

But erosion carried off most of the topsoil, harbors silted up with mud, river deltas became marshy pestholes infested with malaria and mosquitoes. Goats completed the devastation. Lots of goats - goats who will eat almost any type of green stuff, including young trees, which were eaten and killed as fast as they appeared.

Today Lebanon is largely desert.

But all this was long ago. After all, they didn't know any better. Surely we moderns aren't so dumb.

When we arrived on this continent three hundred years ago we found an abundance never before encountered by man. Nearly two million acres of land, two-thirds covered with magnificent forests or lush grass, lakes, rivers, abundant wildlife, adequate rainfall, all defended by scattered bands of primitive people armed only with bows and arrows.

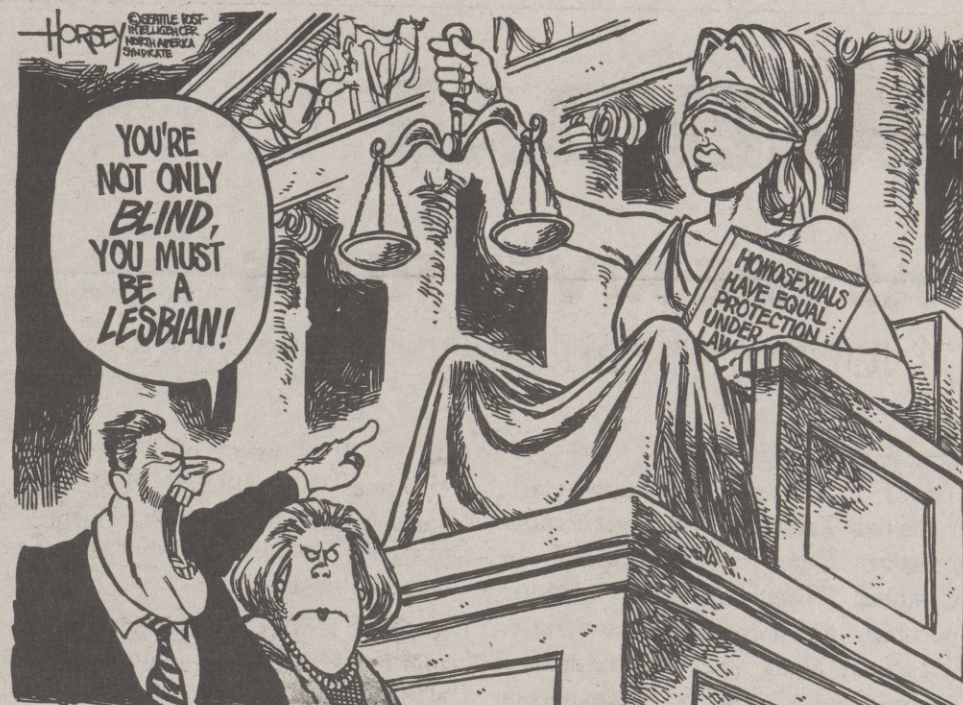

And what have we done with all this richness?

Well, according to the President's Council on Environmental Quality, three hundred million acres of farm and ranch lands are dangerously eroded; topsoil on two-thirds of our farm lands now measures less than six inches; thousands of hillsides are deeply gullied; harbors and navigable streams are choked with silt; fish, suffocated by mud or killed by a poisonous waste are gone from streams, and floods have become national disasters.

The Phoenicians had goats - we have cattle and sheep, by the millions. Their overgrazing is turning those once lush grasslands into deserts, home to tumbleweed, sagebrush, rabbits and rattlesnakes.

Dr. Anton J. Carlson, past President of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, questions the ability of American civilization to survive another century of thoughtless waste.

It's the first law of the jungle - adapt or perish. And we do call ourselves law abiding, no?

WHAT'S NEXT? Mel Vercoe

I sure hope retired presidents and congress members won't get caught in the crunch and lose their medical care rights, when the Medicare funds run out five years from now. Seriously, Jay Leno and Saturday Night Live together couldn't begin to compete with our main wheels in Washington for pure comedy.

How do they do it? Even Simon Legree, a famous slave owner, must have been concerned about the health of his employees. How can our "main wheels" look serious and concerned during election speeches, promising to spend more and more of our borrowed money on new weapons projects, (to keep defense workers happy). Or dangling income tax refunds for parents rich enough to send some of their children to college, while fully aware, (because they were the cause of it), that we, all of us, are about to go into bankruptcy?

What an interesting period in world history to be alive, with over population and greed and technology upsetting all of Nature's great plans for life on this Planet Earth, possibly the only spot in the whole universe where life exists. It must certainly be the only spot where the supposedly highest form of life is unable to muster enough common sense to preserve itself as a species, or to try very hard to get a fairly good brand of democracy to work.

The suspense is becoming unbearable. Will Dole be able to convince anybody that whatever he's talking about is "what America is all about"? Will Pres. Clinton be able to save any more foreign countries from "bad guys" before somebody finds some more strange fingerprints, someplace near the White House?

LETTERS to the Editor

Thanks to Valley Fire Department

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

I would like to thank the Carmel Valley Fire Department, especially Pat Dowd, and the California Department of Forestry for their quick response and professional help in putting out a brush fire at the Holman Ranch on Saturday, June 1. The firefighters made provisions should the fire spread, but were able to quickly contain and put out the fire.

Perhaps this is the time to remind all Monterey County residents that fire season is here and to exercise caution at all times. In the country, please know that a carelessly tossed cigarette butt or parking a car in dry grass can quickly start a fire. It is everyone's responsibility to be aware of the dangers during fire season and to be thoughtful and responsible in

COMPUTER TALK

Val Healey

Part 14 - An introduction to computers at a naively simple level

This week we extend the program we looked at in the last part to considering what are called "logical" expressions. This is in fact how a computer makes "decisions" - in the Arithmetic and Logic Unit (ALU). We already have the bonus B and the salary array SALARY. Now suppose for simplicity that all employees are engaged in selling and, at the end of the month, the sales figures for each employee is known. These figures could be put into an array SALES, such that SALES (1) is the address of the sales figure for employee #1, SALES (875) is the address for employee #875, etc. The values stored at these addresses are the actual sales figures. The addresses could be those in a file that is written to, and stored, on the hard disk or those in memory, when the array is loaded there. Again, think of this array as a row of mailboxes with labels SALES (1), SALES (2) ... Now we need some threshold for the bonus, say $3000. Let the letter T represent this threshold and sales greater than this amount will result in a bonus of 25%. That is "IF SALES (1) is greater than T, then SALARY (1) = SALARY (1) x 1.25" or, in simple English, if the sales figure for employee #1 is greater than $3000, then give employee #1 a 25% bonus. The statement here in quotes is called an "IF statement". Mathematically the symbol > is used for "greater than" and < for "less than".

Now we need to list T as a real variable (actually we could treat it as an integer in this application) and SALES as a 1000 element array. We also need to specify T and read the SALES array into memory. So we now have:

- (1) REAL B, T, SALARY (1000), SALES (1000)
- (2) INTEGER I
- (3) B=1.25
- (4) T=3000
- (5) READ (from somewhere) SALARY
- (6) READ (from somewhere) SALES
- (7) Do 1 I=1 to 1000
- (8) 1 IF SALES (I) > T, SALARY (I) - SALARY (I) X 1.25

Here the sales figure for each employee is compared with T and, if it is less, the statement, "IF SALES (I) > T" is true, and the 25% bonus is awarded; have a look at the DO Loop in Part 13 and compare with what we have here. The precise form of this DO Loop and IF statement varies from language to language.

The above exercise involves an extremely simple form of decision making.

Finally, we need to "output" the results.

(9) WRITE (to somewhere) SALARY and the new salaries are written to some file. Again the program would be compiled and run when required.

Exercise - to keep you readers off the streets and out of fights for a few minutes:

What does the following Do Loop do?

Do 1 I=1 to 1000
IF SALES (I) > T AND SALES (I) < 2 X T, SALARY (I) - SALARY (I) X 1.25

1 IF SALES (I) > 2 x T, SALARY (I) = SALARY (I) x 1.5
where the xs all denote multiplications. The answer will be given in the next part.

In general, highly complex decisions can be made by computers. For example:

If A>B AND C<D OR A>D AND D NOT (equal to) E, then ...do something. Using strings of ANDs, ORs, NOTs...searches out the situation for which some action is specified. A whole field of mathematics called Boolean Algebra deals with this kind of decision making. It is also used for searching databases - electronic archives possibly with millions of references - to narrow down a search. If you do a search using two or three words, and you get 35,261 documents, then you have to start excluding.

This just about concludes the mathematical part of the course.

Douglas Pease

One thing always leads to another on the Internet. When a friend bought shares of IOMEGA at the very, very top of a meteoric rise, I wondered if he knew something the rest of us did not know. After three hours prowling the Internet my conclusion was "no". The quest led to another company - call it ABC Corp - which manufactures removable disk drives essential to IOMEGA's "Zip" product. Would the direct linkage to IOMEGA serve, in turn, to improve ABC Corp's stock performance? My conclusion was "maybe", but for quite different reasons than those for IOMEGA's sudden popularity. What I really found was the design and function of a successful high-tech company ... one that might be worth owning for the next few years.

ABC Corp was formed by a parent company in 1988, to buy out another disk drive company on its last legs. Things improved from worse to not bad, and in November 1995 the primary movers at ABC Corp. hocked the company ("recapitalization") to buy back its stock from the parent. At that moment the stock was valued at $.03 a share. In January 1996 it was valued at $.09 a share. In March 1996 it was valued at $24 a share. On May 31, 1996 it was valued at $26 a share. ABC Corp issued stock to raise enough capital to retire bank debt and older notes paying 12%, and to grow the company. Productivity improved, production costs shrank, orders rose ... all by factors of 2 or 3. Net income improved from a negative $8.9 million in 1995 to a positive $46.4 million in 1996 (May 31). The company will spend $150 million in the next 12 months to build a new plant to keep up with the global thirst for increased computer storage capacity.

I downloaded the company's recent electronic filing of Form S-1 (SEC registration to issue new shares of stock) onto a 3.5" floppy disk capable of holding 1.44 megabytes (formatted). By contrast, ABC Corp's current production series of 3.5" portable magnetic disk drives can store 2.6 gigabytes (1000 megabytes in a gigabyte). You can put 2.6 gigabytes in your pocket and take them home, instead of pushing 1800 disks around in a wheelbarrow. The new improved version will be replaced in a year, with another and then others in turn ... all of them in engineering now, alongside the production line.

ABC Corp only has four major customers, all of them ordering the new drives for delivery in Asia, any of them ready to produce their own drives if they can do it faster or cheaper, and all of them able to break an order without penalty. ABC Corps employees work without employment contracts because the grass is greener everywhere else in the Valley. The new officers have only worked together since 1994, the company underwent its initial public offering in March 1996, and the IOMEGA Zip drive went ballistic in April-May 1996. At peak capacity and $65 million in backorders, company leaders restructured the company, reinvented the product, dealt with a month's production ruined by contaminated supplies, acquired a new factory in Oregon, attracted two prospective new customers, prepared for patent litigation, worried about overseas taxes and currency fluctuations, redesigned the next three generations of product, negotiated the siting and construction of a new plant, met most of the health and safety regulations, and stayed on top of the heap. The fact that their new plant sits on the San Andreas Fault is a minor concern, compared to what the competition or a customer can do to them in a week. IOMEGA had its day in the sun ... there will be others, I'm sure of it now.
